Madame Proust y la cocina kosher (Nuevos Tiempos) (Spanish Edition) Kate Taylor

En el París de fin de siècle, Jeanne Proust, una culta mujer judía casada con un médico católico, escribe en sus libretas todo tipo de acontecimientos personales y generales, aunque el tema más recurrente es su hijo Marcel, a quien sus altas aspiraciones sociales, sus insatisfechas ambiciones literarias y su delicada salud impiden terminar de encajar de la vida burguesa de la época. En la relación de los desvelos de Madame Proust irrumpe el relato de las insatisfacciones de Marie Prévost, traductora de los diarios, cuya obsesión por el documento será un bálsamo contra su amor no correspondido hacia el enigmático Max. La tercera historia que se entrelaza en la trama de esta apasionada novela es la de Sarah Bensimon, una refugiada parisina a quien sus padres enviaron de niña a Canadá para escapar del terror nazi. Instalada definitivamente en Toronto y cada vez más alejada de su marido y de su hijo adolescente, Sarah se refugia en su cocina, donde batalla por reconciliar sus esperanzas y decepciones y por curar las profundas heridas provocadas por la Historia.
